

ARCHITECTURAL DIGEST

THE INTERNATIONAL MAGAZINE OF DESIGN

DECEMBER 2007

An Exclusive Look Inside Private Homes

Irwin Weiner

The guest room in Irwin Weiner's weekend house in Pennsylvania functions equally well for his young nieces and for his older visitors. Weiner "didn't want the room to be too childish," he says, but at the same time, he wanted the space to be comfortable. As he does when he creates rooms for his clients' children, Weiner eschewed built-ins in favor of pieces that can be easily moved or changed and selected hypoallergenic materials like cotton (the Ralph Lauren Home bedding is made of that fiber) and cork. Though sophisticated, the space, he says, "is appropriate for kids."